2009
American Liszt Society National Festival
Liszt and the Art of Transcription
April 3–5, 2009

University of Kansas, Lawrence, Kansas | Steven Spooner, Festival Director
Presented by the University of Kansas School of Fine Arts, Spencer Museum of Art, Lied Center, Bales Organ Recital Hall
Dear Friends in Liszt,

The officers and board of the American Liszt Society welcome you to this 2009 festival at the University of Kansas. It is a special privilege to receive the warm hospitality of this school which boasts such a rich tradition of musical excellence. Liszt himself would feel right at home—along with the piano here which he owned and played. I want to express our deep gratitude to all administrative and staff members at this university who worked to make this festival so successful. Particularly, I want to thank Steven Spooner whose efforts were central to this success.

This festival is dedicated to a special facet of Liszt. Transcription in Liszt’s day was an art form and not plagiarism. It was a form with a function to pay homage to colleagues and composers of previous times. In the days before electronic media, the piano’s widespread use made it possible for works for orchestra, voice and other instruments to enter public awareness via piano arrangements and transcriptions. By doing this, Liszt enabled the public to have access at home to Beethoven symphonies, to many operas and various other compositions that could be heard only less frequently in concert halls.

The vast amount of work that Liszt put into this promotion of his colleagues’ art has been too often mistakenly attributed to Liszt’s presumed motive of self-aggrandizement. It hardly takes any thought at all to realize that Liszt did not need a tune of Wagner’s to make a pianistic splash. And his faithfulness to Beethoven in the symphonic transcriptions reveals nothing but homage to the great master he revered.

If one examines even the paraphrases, in which transcription becomes a platform for musical commentary and amplification, Liszt exhibits fidelity, humility, inspiration and ingenious musical enhancements. By the end of this festival, I hope that you will come to see that when he departs from the original composer’s musical notation, he does so first to make the music sound good on the piano and secondly to make the music sound good in his hands—much as a cook would vary a recipe to bring out the flavors of indigenous ingredients.

The fact that Liszt devoted such considerable effort to promoting the works of other composers through piano transcriptions is a fact completely compatible with the philosophy of this great thinker. His belief that his own great talent had to be matched by a commensurate responsibility to those around him enlivened his art. Liszt’s transcriptions reveal this sense of responsibility. Not only are they philosophically and musically inspiring, but they are fun to hear. I hope that you will enjoy this festival. If you are not yet a member of the American Liszt Society, please join us in learning from this great man, Franz Liszt.

Sincerely,

Thomas Mastroianni

Washington, DC, March 20, 2009

Dear Mr. Spooner,

I was most delighted to learn that Hungarian Pianist Mr. Ádám György has been invited to perform at the American Liszt Society National Festival hosted by you at the University of Kansas in Lawrence, KS on April 3-5, 2009.

This is a wonderful opportunity for Ádám to be heard again among the piano elite of the United States. As you may know, Ádám, a Steinway Artist, gave piano recitals all over the world from Sao Paulo to Rome and from Budapest to Bangkok. During his American Tour in 2004, CNN billed him as a ‘Rising Star’ from Hungary.

The Embassy of Hungary in Washington, DC has been strongly supportive of Ádám’s recitals in Washington, DC ever since the beginnings. The Embassy introduced him to the audience of the American University’s Katzen Art Center when he played with you in Washington, DC on Saturday, October 28, 2006.

In November, 2006 he went on to tour in Europe and Asia, playing and lecturing in St. Gallen, Bangkok, Singapore, Kuala Lumpur, Jakarta, Denpasar, Beijing, Shanghai, Kunming and several other cities in China. He returned to the United States several times before he gave his concert at Carnegie Hall in New York on November 2, 2008 and at the Embassy of Hungary in Washington, DC on November 6, 2008.

We hope to welcome and present Ádám again at the Embassy of Hungary in 2009 during Extremely Hungary, a yearlong cultural festival showcasing contemporary Hungarian visual, performing, and literary arts in New York and Washington, DC throughout 2009. The festival reveals the roots of Hungary’s thriving contemporary culture and its impact on American society through a broad spectrum of events at leading cultural institutions in the two cities.

I wish you and all the participants of the American Liszt Society’s National Festival 2009 all the best in your professional career.

Sincerely,

Dr. Ferenc Somogyi

Greetings fellow Lisztians,

It is my honor and pleasure to welcome you to the 2009 American Liszt Society National Festival, Liszt and the Art of Transcription. This year’s theme examines transcriptions by several composers and celebrates Liszt’s enormous influence on this once-maligned genre. The sheer size of this genre indicates Liszt’s lifelong fascination with the multifaceted process of transcription and the necessary re-creative imagination it requires. Maurice Hinson points out that the Liszt transcriptions “probably represent the greatest body of unperformed music in any instrumental repertoire, but no valid assessment of Liszt, the composer, can be made without reference to this music.”

Through performances of seldom-heard repertoire and probing lectures, world-renowned presenters will illustrate the many qualities of this distinctive art form that requires a high level of creative adaptation—taking advantage of an instrument’s broad offerings, while successfully working within its limitations to produce pieces of value that are not re-workings but a genre of its own.

The University of Kansas is pleased to host the 2009 American Liszt Society National Festival, and I would like to thank several who have made this festival a reality—namely Susan Elkins from KU Continuing Education, who has served as executive coordinator; the festival presenters, who have traveled from far and wide to enrich us with their artistic contributions; and numerous individuals who gave liberally of their time and resources to make this unique event a success.

Sincerely,

Steven Spooner
2009 Festival Director

Abstract: This presentation will turn the tables on that master of transcription and paraphrase, Franz Liszt. Just for fun, we’ll demonstrate how others have paraphrased Liszt! Several particularly imaginative albeit outrageous examples include how the B-Minor Sonata has been translated into ballet scores for Roland Petit (“Hans Christian Anderson”) and the team of Nureyev/Fonteyn (Ashton’s “Armand and Marguerite”); how Clara Schumann rebuked Liszt’s showy paraphrase of Robert’s “Widmung” with her own version (Katharine Hepburn in “Song of Love (1947)”; how the Tom and Jerry cartoon characters dismantled the “Hungarian Rhapsody no. 2”; and how filmmaker Ken Russell transformed the “Liebestraume, no. 3” into a Charlie Chaplin pantomime (Roger Daltry in “Lisztomania (1975).” Given time, there may be a surprise encore. . .

Jonathan Kregor

This paper draws upon the literary translation theories of Friedrich Schleiermacher, Wilhelm von Humboldt, and Lawrence Venuti, the defenses of the engraving by Charles Blanc and Philippe Burty, and attitudes toward musical transcription by Franz Liszt and Ferruccio Busoni. It suggests that a more fruitful way to discuss the nineteenth-century world of artistic reproduction in general—and Liszt’s musical transcriptions in particular—is to move away from rigid hierarchical degrees of reproductive success or failure in favor of exposing contextual relationships between source and arrangement, composer and arranger, and public and performer. In short, the question turns from “what does a transcription reproduce?” to “what does a transcription create?”

Stephen Ackert is head of the music department at the National Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C., and an adjunct teacher of organ at Northern Virginia Community College in Alexandria, Va. A graduate of Oberlin College, Northwestern University, and the University of Wisconsin, Dr. Ackert studied organ and harpsichord as a Fulbright scholar in Frankfurt, Germany, where his teachers were Helmut Walcha and Maria Jaeger-Jung. He has performed organ and harpsichord recitals and presented lecture-recitals in many of Washington, D.C.’s prime venues, including the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, the National Cathedral, the National Gallery of Art and the German Embassy. In 1999, he was a featured performer in the renowned “Thüringer Orgelsommer” recital series, playing on six historic instruments in Thuringia, and in 2007, he returned to Germany for his eighth recital tour of historic concert halls and churches in that country. Ackert has served three Washington area churches as organist and director of music: St. Margaret’s Episcopal Church (Washington, D.C.), The Falls Church (Falls Church, Va.), and The United Church (Formerly Concordia Kirche, Washington’s first German-language congregation). At the United Church, he founded a series of Bach concerts that continued for 13 years, included more than 40 concerts and developed a loyal following of Bach enthusiasts. At the National Gallery of Art, Ackert plans weekly public concerts and presents lectures and lecture-recitals on subjects that bring together visual and musical arts. He has served on the boards of directors of the Washington International Bach Competition, the Arlington Symphony and is currently on the advisory board of the Amalfi Coast Music Festival and the Westfield Center.

A Kansas native, Koji Attwood is a winner of Astral Artistic Services’ 2003 National Auditions and was the featured artist in May 2003 on www.yamahamusicsoft.com’s New York City Rising Star Series. Mr. Attwood made his solo debut at the age of 10, and one year later won second prize at the Young Keyboard Artists Association International Competition. He claimed second prize at both the Stravinsky and the Missouri Southern International Keyboard Competitions and was a participant at the International William Kapell Keyboard Competition and the Hamamatsu International Piano Competition. Mr. Attwood has performed numerous solo recitals across the country, including concerts in Steinway Hall and on the Kosciuszko Foundation Concert Series. He appears regularly on the “World of the Piano” series at Juilliard and is frequently heard on “Reflections from the Keyboard: the Pianist in Comparative Performance,” a weekly radio show on New York’s WQXR station. Committed to the performance of contemporary music, Mr. Attwood has given the recent world premières of works by Cynthia Folio, Hector Morales Martinez, and Daniel Ott. Also active in chamber music, Mr. Attwood has performed with members of the Borromeo and St. Lawrence String Quartets and is a regular collaborator with Mikhail Baryshnikov—having performed with the dancer’s White Oak Dance Project and provided music for Mr. Baryshnikov’s 2002–03 solo tour of the United States. Koji Attwood received a bachelor of music degree from the Curtis Institute of Music, where he studied with Seymour Lipkin, and a master of music degree from The Juilliard School under Jerome Lowenthal. He recently earned his doctor of musical arts degree at Juilliard, where he continued his studies with Mr. Lowenthal.

Paul Barnes, praised by The New York Times for his “Lisztian thunder and deft fluidity,” and the San Francisco Chronicle as “ferociously virtuosic,” has electrified audiences with his intensely expressive playing and cutting-edge programming. He has been featured four times on APR’s “Performance Today” and on the cover of Clavier Magazine. Barnes presented the world premier of Philip Glass’s Piano Concerto no. 2 (After Lewis and Clark), and the premier recording was recently released by Orange Mountain Music. Gramophone Magazine remarked that this recording is “certainly one of the most enjoyable recent releases of Glass’s music. … Paul Barnes is a shining soloist.” Barnes is professor and co-chair of piano at the University of Nebraska–Lincoln School of Music. He teaches summers at the Bösendorfer International Piano Academy in Vienna and coaches students of Menahem Pressler, Barnes’ own teacher, at Indiana University, where Barnes received his doctorate in piano performance. Recent performances include Philip Glass Retrospective recitals at the European Piano Teachers Association Conference in Novi Sad, Serbia, and the 50th Anniversary College Music Society National Conference in Salt Lake City. Barnes released his eleventh CD last February, “The American Virtuoso,” featuring music of Samuel Barber, Joan Tower and Philip Glass. Paul Barnes’ recording of the music of Philip Glass is available at Amazon.com or on Itunes. Visit www.paulbarnes.net.

Edmund Battersby received his bachelor’s and master’s of music from the Juilliard School of Music. He made his concert debuts in Wigmore Hall in London and Alice Tully Hall in Lincoln Center. He has collaborated with such celebrated ensembles as the Tokyo Quartet, the Orion Quartet and the Vermeer Quartet and has been a featured artist at festivals such as Mostly Mozart in New York and the Santa Fe Chamber Music Festival. At the Library of Congress in Washington, D.C., he has performed more than 30 works of chamber music that were broadcast live nationally. Battersby’s recording of Granados’ Goyescas for Koch International was short-listed for a Grammy Award, and his landmark double CD of Beethoven’s Diabelli Variations, released in 2005 (Naxos), which he presented on both period and modern instruments, has received worldwide attention. Other recordings feature the complete Songs Without Words of Mendelssohn (MHS) as well as discs of Schubert, Schumann and Chopin works. Battersby was invited to the Smithsonian Institution to give the U.S. premiere on Queen Victoria’s 1851 Erard piano, which Liszt had used to perform for the Queen and Prince Albert at Balmoral Castle, Scotland. He has also played period pianos at the Frick Collection in N.Y., the Bard Festival as well as Pro Musica Rara in Baltimore. Edmund Battersby has taught at the Jacobs School of Music at Indiana University since 1995. He is director of the Artur Balsam Ensemble and teaches classes for piano and strings through the IU Foundation and the Charley Creek Foundation.

Corbin Beisner started playing piano at age five and began studying jazz with Rick DeBella. At 12, he began studying classical piano and also became interested in composition. His principle early teachers were Roger Bushell and Ekaterina Melkamini. He has attended summer music festivals at Interlochen, Mich., the Mannes School of Music in New York City, the Forum Internacional de Musica in Barcelona, Spain, and the Lake Como Summer Piano Academy in Lake Como, Italy. He has won numerous awards at competitions, including: MTNA state competition, International Liszt Competition in Asuza, Calif., the Liberace play-alike competition, and the Premier Prize in Forum Internacional de Musica competition. Mr. Beisner has also worked with teachers such as Mykola Suk, Daniel Pollack, Leslie Howard, Fabio Bidini, William Grant Nabore and Stanislav Ioudenitch. He is currently studying with Luiz de Moura Castro at the Hartt School of Music in Hartford, Conn. He continues to perform, compose and improvise and plans on being a touring composer-pianist in the near-future.

Soprano Julia Broxholm maintains a versatile schedule of solo and chamber music performances. She is a founding member of SATB, a vocal quartet specializing in vocal chamber music of the 19th and 20th centuries. Her particular area of interest as a recitalist is vocal literature by American composers of the 20th and 21st centuries. Her SATB performances have taken her from the Cayman Islands International Music Festival, to Severance Hall, to Kilbourn Hall at Eastman School of Music. Recordings include two releases with SATB: Magic, and It’s a Grand Night…Four Singing. She has also recorded two CDs of soprano, clarinet repertoire with clarinetist Fred Ormand and pianist Martin Katz. Of Shepherds,
Romance and Love features music of the 19th century, and Transcendence includes Ariel by Ned Rorem, and To Be Sung Upon the Water by Dominick Argento. She received her D.M.A from the University of Michigan School of Music, and she is currently on the voice faculty of the University of Kansas Department of Music and Dance in the School of Fine Arts.

Bridget de Moura Castro holds degrees from London, Budapest and Fort Worth. She has lectured in Japan, Spain, Switzerland, Argentina and Brazil. Her 12 CDs include Liszt’s two-piano works with her husband, four organ CDs recorded in Portugal on an historic organ, and concerts at Hartford Cathedral, Austin, Tex., and on a Bremer organ in Rio de Janeiro. This past year, she performed for the Mexican Guild of Organists in Taxco, gave two recitals in Chile and one at Mendoza Cathedral, Argentina. She will be performing organ recitals in Portugal and England this summer.

Luiz de Moura Castro, international concert artist with over 40 CDs, is a professor at the Hartt School, University of Hartford; Liceu Barcelona; Pro Arte, Rio de Janeiro; CUYO Mendoza. A specialist in romantic works (especially Liszt), Beethoven and South American Music, Luiz offers master classes and private lessons and is a popular international festival participant. He has a Latin Grammy nomination and a Liszt DVD for World Piano Pedagogy Conference.

Frederic Chiu’s Chinese-American background combines with his many years of living in France to create a unique, worldly perspective on Classical music and the piano. He has performed extensively in Europe, Asia, South America and North America, including at Wigmore Hall, Avery Fisher Hall, the Kennedy Center, the Theatre des Champs-Elysees, Suntory Hall and the China National Concert Hall. He has worked with conductors John Nelson, Stefan Sanderling and Alexander Titov, and with orchestras such as the Kansas City Symphony, the BBC Concert Orchestra and Scottish Symphony, the Calgary Symphony and the China National Symphony. His regular chamber music partners include Joshua Bell, Pierre Amoyal, Gary Hoffman, Fred Sherry, Charles Neidich, David Krakauer and the St. Lawrence and Amernet Quartets. His repertoire ranges from Bach to Frederick Rzewski, Elliott Carter to Gao Ping, with a special interest in composers of the early 20th century. He has recorded over 20 CDs, including the complete works of Prokofiev in 10 CDs and works by Chopin, Liszt, Mendelssohn, Schumann, Rossini, Debussy and Ravel. His latest recording was produced by Producer of the Year Grammy award-winner Judith Sherman, featuring the Beethoven Symphony V transcribed by Liszt for solo piano. Chiu is highly in demand as a teacher for master classes and workshops. His Deeper Piano Studies program has received rave reviews from participants and teachers; a documentary of one of the DPS workshops is available on DVD and YouTube.com. He has been a guest speaker at the Juilliard School, Manhattan School of Music, the New England Conservatory, the Central Conservatory of China, and most recently at the Jacob School of Music at Indiana University. Of the 10 choirs at the University of Kansas, the University of Kansas Concert Chorale is the largest select mixed ensemble. This group performs works that span the entire breadth of choral literature and require an advanced level of musicianship, vocal and ensemble skills. The choir includes both undergraduate and graduate students from all majors and disciplines. Under the direction of Dr. Paul Tucker, the KU Concert Choir has been selected for performances at Kansas Music Educators Association and for the Southwest Division of the American Choral Directors Association. Concert Choir has been recognized for its innovative approach to programming, frequently performing premieres of new works and rarely performed choral works.
Biographies

Alexandre Dossin, considered by Martha Argerich an “extraordinary musician” and by international critics as a “phenomenon” and “a master of contrasts,” keeps an active performing, recording and teaching career. With degrees from the Moscow Tchaikovsky Conservatory and the University of Texas at Austin, he has studied with Sergei Dorensky, William Race and Gregory Allen. Dossin received First Prize and the Special Prize at the 2003 Martha Argerich International Piano Competition in Buenos Aires, Argentina. Other awards include the Silver Medal and second honorable mention in the Maria Callas Grand Prix, and Third Prize and Special Prize in the Mozart International Piano Competition. Dossin has performed recitals, concertos with orchestras, and chamber music in over 20 countries, including international festivals in Japan, Canada, United States, Brazil and Argentina, on some occasions sharing the stage with Martha Argerich. He has several CDs released with Naxos, BlueGriffin and MSR Classics labels and is praised in reviews by Diapason, The Financial Times, Fanfare Magazine, American Record Guide, Clavier and other international publications. Dossin was recently featured in the main interview and on the cover of Clavier Magazine (May, 2008) and is an editor for the Schirmer Performance Editions Series (The Seasons, by P. Tchaikovsky, 2009).

Susan Earle is curator of European & American art at the Spencer Museum of Art and a courtesy assistant professor in the history of art department at KU. She taught previously at New York University and was a research assistant at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York. She has organized more than 30 exhibitions and held a Curatorial Research Fellowship from the Getty Foundation. Dr. Earle earned a B.A. with distinction in English and art history at Williams College in Massachusetts, and an M.A. and Ph.D. in art history at the Institute of Fine Arts at New York University.

Ekaterina Gotsdiner, born in Toula, Russia, holds a degree in music theory from the Moscow Music Tchaikovsky College and degrees in musicology and organ from the Moscow State Conservatory. Her Russian teachers included Oleg Yantchenko and Alexey Semyonov, and she has participated in master classes with Peter Planjovsky, Ludger Lomann and Jos van der Kooij. Gotsdiner won prizes at the First Kitka International Organ Competition (2005), The First Beedlaw Moscow Festival of the Young Artists (2007), the Fifth International Organ Music Festival-Competition “Gatchina–St. Petersburg” (2004), the Sixth International Organ Competition Marcello Galanti (2005, Italy), and the First All-Russian Festival-Competition for young organists “Soli Deo Gloria” (2007). She has performed at concert halls and churches in Moscow and throughout Russia, as well as in Austria, Italy, the Netherlands and the United States. She has been featured on Russian state radio and television and has performed and lectured about Russian organ music at UCLA and in Amsterdam. In addition, she taught music theory at Moscow Conservatory College from 2001–08. Gotsdiner was an associate of music ministry at the Catholic Church of the Immaculate Conception in Moscow and currently serves as organist at St. Ann’s Catholic Church in Prairie Village, Kan. She is enrolled in the master’s degree program in church music at the University of Kansas, where she studies with Michael Bauer.

Adam Gyorgy was accepted to the Béla Bartók Conservatory as a prodigy in 1994, at the age of 12. He flourished under the tutelage of his piano teacher, Katalin Halmagyi. In 1998, he won the National Youth Piano Competition and two years later won Hungary’s Pianist 2000 award at the age of 18. He was accepted at the Franz Liszt Academy of Music in Budapest in 2000 and studied under Professors György Nador and Balazs Reti. He graduated in 2006 and is currently doing his doctoral studies at the Liszt Academy with a state scholarship. In 2002, Adam won the Vienna Classics Prize (Wiener-Klassik-Preis) with his outstanding interpretation of Haydn’s Sonata in G major (no. 54). In 2003, he won the Special Prize at the San Remo International Piano Competition, and in 2004, he won all prizes (First Prize, Grand Prize and Special Prize) at the First International Chopin Piano Competition in Budapest. That same year, CNN World Report identified him as a “rising star.” On October 22, 2006, Adam debuted at New York’s Carnegie Hall to great acclaim. He continues to tour the world, delighting audiences in the United States, Europe and Southeast Asia with his virtuosity, his charm, and his improvisations on well-known melodies, all of which invite comparisons to the incomparable Franz Liszt.
Canadian-born Joel Hastings was the winner of the 2006 8th International Web Concert Hall Competition and the 1993 International Bach Competition, Washington, D.C. At the Tenth Van Cliburn International Piano Competition in Fort Worth, Texas, one reporter designated Mr. Hastings the “audience favorite” while another wrote, “The kinetic fingers of this young Canadian reminded me strongly of his late countryman, Glenn Gould.” In a Newsweek review, he “pulled the audience to their feet after a wild performance of Franz Liszt’s Totentanz.” Reviewers have described his playing as passionate, mesmerizing, hypnotic and transcendental. His discography includes CDs of Franz Liszt’s song and operatic transcriptions; Frederic Chopin’s 24 etudes; and selections of works by Prokofiev, Rachmaninoff, Mendelssohn and Scriabin, available on the Prestant Records label. His latest CD includes works by Grieg and Respighi, along with transcriptions of music by Bach, Schubert, Wagner and Gershwin, available on the Cambridge Recording label.

Geraldine Keeling is founder/director of the Los Angeles International Liszt Competition. She also has done extensive research on the pianos and concerts of Franz Liszt. Justin Kolb delights in playing music that lives in undeserved obscurity. He is also committed to the career development field, focusing on such issues as entrepreneurship, community engagement and technology. This past year, Justin shared his views with audiences at the College Music Society’s regional conference in Gettysburg, Chamber Music America’s annual conference and the Music Teachers National Association in Atlanta. He will address these issues at the World Piano Conference in Novi Sad, Serbia, and also present a solo recital. His Albany Records recordings include music by Robert Starer and William Ferris and have received enthusiastic reviews. A recipient of the Distinguished Alumnus Award from DePaul University, Justin serves on the ALS Board of Directors. He cites German Diez, former student and assistant to Claudio Arrau and Justin’s friend, mentor, teacher and artistic advisor, as his most important musical influence. Visit: www.justinkolb.com.

Biographies

Slava and Lana Levin, concert pianists born in the Soviet Union, came to the U.S. with their 2-year-old daughter Anna in November 1989. Both hold doctoral degrees from the Moscow State Tchaikovsky Conservatory, where they studied with such outstanding musicians as Yakov Milstein, Lev Vlasenko and Michael Pletnev. The Levins have played together and as soloists throughout the Kansas City area at colleges and universities, museums, churches and synagogues, and as part of Kansas City Chamber Soloists. They have also played in Montreal, New York at the 92nd Street Y, Dallas TCU, Jefferson City Community Concerts, Litchfield Performing Arts Series, Hartford Symphony and Kansas City Camerata. After a seven-year performing hiatus, the Levins presented a two-piano benefit concert for the Folly Theater and raised $80,000 for the Turning Point, a local organization offering support for individuals and families facing chronic illnesses. From 2004 to 2006, the Levins performed charitable concerts for Children’s Hope International in Saint Louis to benefit orphans worldwide and Worldways Children’s Museum. In 2006, they raised $10,000 in a private Kansas City home recital to benefit underprivileged children. The Levins perform in public for charities only.
